PIGS RIOT AT UNFAIR FAIR

Riots broke out 20 minutes after the winner of this years Calling Human Contest was announced. Two hours of mayhem troubled Wart County Fair before police could bring peace and order to the crowd.

Members of the Wart County Fair Committee could not understand why the crowd would get wild just because they disagreed with the judges. "Not many of us agreed but in the rules the judges' decision is final."

One hog said, "After training my entry and then having him beaten by a man that couldn't call himself to dinner was a little hard to take. I think of all those nights I waited in the barn until my human called loud and clear enough. They're not the easiest things to train."

It was reported that the winner read his call from paper and was not loud enough to be heard by the audience that stood between him and the judges.

The judges will be asked to comment as soon as they return from their vacations in the Bahamas.

HOG ROAST PLANNED FOR SATURDAY

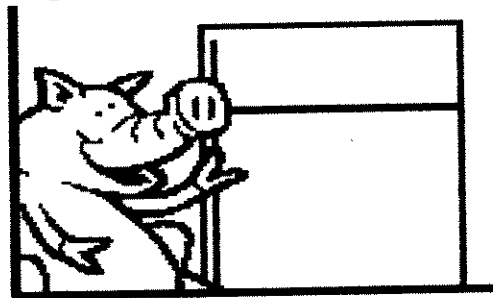

A dinner is to be given to honor the ex-mayor Altic Graft. The night of gayety is being planned before Mr. Graft can leave for retirement in Switzerland.

Friends will be offered the chance to toast and give testimonials to the hog of honor. We all wish him the best of luck during his retirement now that things have been cleared up with the IRS.

SCIENTIST AWARDED $2,000,000 GRANT FOR STUDY

Pigs of all age, race, and sex can be proud that their letters have forced the government to make a final determination of whether the light goes out when the door is closed.

STAR PIGLET FOUND ON FARM

The strange lights seen over the Donald farm 10 months ago and the birth of an alien piglet has lead to the speculation that we are not alone in our universe.

The mother said her son seemed to be strange but when he started to levitate objects using his snout, she knew something was wrong.

The mother has no memory of the visitor but can think of no other explanation for the child.

WORDS, TRY TO FIND

Every one dreams of it but few of us will ever get there. May be if we wish upon a star.
