BEARS GET GRIZZLY OVER ARMS ISSUE

Recently proposed arms legislation has created an atmosphere of tension within the bear community. Most do not understand the necessity for changing their constitutional right to bear arms.

The legislation was submitted during the hibernation period by Eileen Right in the hopes of getting it passed into law before the bears could organize any opposition. Southern representatives succeeded in delaying passage until both sides could be heard by subcommittee members.

At the Thursday news conference, Smokey, spokesbear for the opposition, said, "Since time began, it has been our right to have arms. If only a few are misusing them, why should the majority have to give them up? Without the right to bear arms we, as a species, would cease to exist or become an ever increasing burden to society."

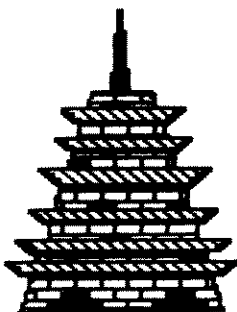

In his closing remarks Smokey said, "This is nothing more than a small group's vendetta against bears. If the legislators were really concerned about public safety, they would enact laws restricting the use of guns by humans."

BUILDING CODES BLOCK CONSTRUCTION OF TEMPLE

The town council welcomed foreign investors until they unveiled the plans for a new temple that would destroy the rural skyline.

Building codes now state, "No building over 30 feet tall may be constructed unless for the purpose of storing corn."

Many investors have been pulling their money from local investments saying, "No pigoda, No money."

EARTHQUAKES EXPLAINED BY PLATE THEORY

Scientists at Cal. State (Calorie State University) have put fourth a new theory to explain the occurrence of the worlds earthquakes. After years of tireless research, the facts have led to the startling conclusion that when to many pigs start jumping up and down when their plates are empty, something has to give.

THE FALL OF WALL MEANS BAN ON CAN

The Iron Curtain is being opened for the first time in over forty years. Drastic measures are no longer needed to make the trip from east to west. Communist pigs were compelled to seal themselves in cans and then be shipped across the border to freedom in the west.

Only the most desperate would try this method of travel due to it's low success rate. Most would run out of air and end up on store shelves.

TUESDAY IS THE GREAT WORLD SMOKE-OUT

A day has been designated as a day to go smokeless, in an effort to increase the awareness of the dangers to pigs. People are being asked to refrain from eating smoked meats for just a day.
