Introduction: Background & Thesis Statement
Organization	The thesis statement (the answer to the central question, “To what extent is your current approach to conflict prudent?”) is clear, and presented in the introduction. The paper and its topic is introduced with minimal fanfare in four or five sentences. It is made clear how the paper will justify its thesis statement, not in a detailed outline of the paper, but rather in a concise summary of the steps in argument.	The thesis statement is presented in the introduction. The paper and its topic is introduced with little fanfare in four or five sentences. It is generally clear how the paper will justify its thesis statement, not in a detailed outline of the paper, but rather in a description of the steps in argument.	The thesis statement is not contained in the introduction. The paper and its topic is introduced with too much fanfare, in more than five sentences. The flow of the paper is described as an outline, and not as a description of the steps in argument.	Only the topic is introduced, with no description of the paper’s argument. Or, the argument is described inaccurately.
Thesis Statement	The paper’s introductory paragraph has a clear answer to the central question, “To what extent, if any, have your views on conflict and conflict resolution been reaffirmed, changed, or otherwise evolved?”	The paper’s answer to the central question is obvious, but there is no single clear statement of it in the introductory paragraph.	The paper’s answer to the central question is present, but it must be uncovered or reconstructed from what is actually written in the paper.	No clear answer to the central question is stated.
Body: Justification of the Thesis Statement
Organization	It is very easy to follow the argument. It is made explicit which claims are being used as premises (assumptions, reasons, evidence, etc.), and how these premises are supposed to support the thesis statement. New premises are each distinguished and introduced separately.	It is generally easy to follow the argument. It is clear which claims are being used as premises, and how these premises are supposed to support the thesis statement. Usually, new premises are distinguished and introduced separately.	It is somewhat difficult to follow the argument. It is somewhat unclear which claims are being used as premises, and/or how these premises are supposed to support the thesis statement. Separate premises are lumped together without being clearly distinguished.	It is impossible to follow the argument. It is completely unclear which claims are being used as premises. It is completely unclear how the premises are supposed to support the thesis statement. Premises are presented and discussed randomly, or not at all.
Premises	Each premise (assumption, reason, evidence, etc.) justifying the thesis statement is made clear, and, as much as possible, presented in single statements.	The premises are all clear, although each may not be presented in a single statement.	The premises must be reconstructed from what is actually written in the paper.	There are no premises—the paper merely restates and repeats the thesis statement without justification.

Plausibility	The paper is clear about which premises (assumptions, reasons, evidence, etc.) are controversial and which are not. Persuasive justification is provided for all controversial premises. Premises without justification are logical, reasonable, and seem true. All information (names, facts, etc.) is accurate.	The paper is pretty clear about which premises are controversial and which are not. Persuasive justification is provided for most controversial premises. Premises without justification are at least plausibly true. Most information is accurate with only minor errors.	The paper is not clear about which premises are controversial and which are not. Persuasive justification is not provided for the controversial premises. The plausibility of the premises that are taken as given is questionable. Some information contains obvious errors and/or inaccuracies.	The paper makes claims that are much more likely to be false than true. Important claims seem to be fabricated or entirely made up. Most information is incorrect or mistaken.
Support	The premises (assumptions, reasons, evidence, etc.) clearly support the thesis statement, and the author is clearly aware of exactly the kind of support those premises provide. Support of the thesis statement also comes from carefully answering this assignment's four supporting questions.	The premises support the thesis statement, and the author is aware of the general kind of support those premises provide. The four supporting questions are generally answered, though not very well.	The premises somewhat support the thesis statement, but the author does not seem aware of the kind of support those premises actually provide. The four supporting questions are barely addressed in the paper.	The premises do not support the thesis statement. The four supporting questions are not clearly addressed at all in the paper.
Examples	Good, clear examples from the author's life and experiences are used to illustrate concepts and issues. They are relevant, insightful, and well-used.	Examples are clear, relevant, and well-used.	Examples are not clear, only somewhat relevant, and/or not well-used.	Examples are unclear, missing, irrelevant, and/or misused.
Relevance	The relevance of each part of the paper for defending the thesis statement is clear and insightful.	The relevance of each part of the paper for defending the thesis statement is generally clear, though some inessential details appear.	The relevance of each part of the paper for defending the thesis statement is somewhat unclear, and inessential details repeatedly appear.	Significant parts of the paper are not relevant for defending the thesis statement, and there are too many inessential details.
Overall Synthesis	Overall, the paper successfully integrates all its parts into a coherent and compelling argument in defense of the thesis statement.	Overall, the paper integrates most of its parts into a fairly coherent and compelling argument in defense of the thesis statement.	Overall, the paper integrates some of its parts into a somewhat coherent and compelling argument in defense of the thesis statement.	Overall, the paper fails to come together as a coherent and compelling argument in defense of the thesis statement.

Conclusion: One Practical Implication of the Thesis
Practical Implication	There is no summarization of the paper’s argument or contents. One clear and concrete practical implication of accepting the paper’s thesis is proposed. This is one concrete recommendation, based on the paper’s thesis statement, for one substantive thing that can help the author become an even more effective negotiator. (“Practical” means that this is about the author’s actual behavior and actions. “Concrete” means that the recommendation is as specific as possible about what exactly the author should start doing differently.)	There is no summarization of the paper’s argument or contents. One fairly clear practical implication of accepting the paper’s thesis is proposed. This recommendation for the author makes sense and follows from the thesis, though it is not very specific.	There is some unnecessary summarization of the paper’s argument or contents. A practical implication of accepting the paper’s thesis is not made entirely clear. There is no obvious recommendation for the author, or the reader must work to figure it out.	The conclusion needlessly summarizes the contents of the paper. No practical implication of accepting the paper’s thesis statement is given. There is no recommendation at all.
