

Health, Development, and Human Rights

Health, Wealth, and Social Institutions in an Interconnected World

As you read the material for the next class, keep the questions below in mind. To answer these questions you will have to reflect critically on what you have read and possibly re-read important passages. Keep in mind that there are two basic kinds of information that you need to look for in the readings:

1. What are the main points or conclusions that an author accepts with respect to a particular issue?
2. What are the reasons, important considerations, and evidence that lead the author to accept that conclusion?

For our purposes, it is information of the second sort that will be our primary concern since our most basic task is to evaluate the reasons and evidence that are offered to support accepting one possible conclusion about an issue, rather than another.

Although I strongly suggest that you write out brief answers to these questions, you do not have to turn in written responses. You do, however, need to be prepared to speak intelligently to these issues in the next class meeting.

Readings

- Eileen Stillwaggon, "AIDS and Poverty in Africa: Prevention and Treatment Require A Focus On Overall Health and Development".

Questions

1. What is the thesis of Eileen Stillwaggon's paper? Notice that her thesis has two parts. The first part of her thesis is negative, claiming that something is not the case about AIDS in Africa, whereas the second part of her thesis is positive, claiming that something actually is the case about AIDS in Africa. Clearly distinguish between these negative and positive parts of her thesis.
2. How does Stillwaggon defend each part of her thesis? That is, what is her argument in this paper? Clearly distinguish between her descriptive claims (that is, claims based on facts about the world) versus normative claims (that is, claims based on evaluations and prescriptions about the world).
3. Why is this thesis important?
